

Stepping Stones

North and South Pole

After reading a book about arctic animals, the Kindergarten discussed the landscape made of ice and snow. We learned about how animals adapt to the temperatures by having a layer of fat that serves as an insulator. An arctic “ocean” was set up and the children experimented with insulating layers, protecting from the cold.